

14 May 2009

The Non-Executive Chairman of SensL Technology Limited, Joe Gantly, passed away unexpectedly on May 14th 2009. Joe has been with SensL since 2005 in many capacities as SensL has grown. His guidance and influence at the board level has been invaluable and will continue to influence decisions into the future. Joe had a firm but fair manner in dealing with those he worked with and a main asset he possessed was genuine human warmth which was very effective in dealing with people from diverse backgrounds helping to bring them together as a group, committed to a course of action. Joe was an intellectually curious person who always looked beyond the obvious answers and questioned, frequently, all conventional wisdom in an open and helpful manner. Joe was a natural leader with an abundance of energy and enthusiasm in any endeavor which greatly inspired those who worked with him. The board and staff will sincerely miss his input as a colleague and as a friend. In addition to SensL, Joe made ongoing important contributions to many institutions in Ireland and especially in his adopted home of Cork, such as University College Cork, the Cork Chamber of Commerce, Tyndall National Institute, Cork Airport along with a number of local fast growing companies.

We would like to pass our deepest condolences to his wife and family, who we know played the most important roles in his life. May he rest in peace.
